CDW·G and the KCDA Contract 018-A

Introducing CDW Threat Check 3.0

Carbon Black.

Improve your network security with the latest technology on the AEPA contract and CDW's Threat Check service. Combining the power of Cisco®, Tenable™, Splunk® and Carbon Black®, this complimentary program exposes malware, intrusions and other vulnerabilities in an easy-to-deploy package. To learn more, visit CDWG.com/threatcheck.

How It Works

Built on a defense-in-depth architecture, CDW Threat Check detects malware in three steps:

Active Network Monitoring

- Monitors for malicious traffic and endpoint threat activity
- Identifies malware and bot activity, as well as risky internet usage

Insecure Detection

- Identifies unpatched devices, in addition to insecure protocol use and configurations
- Verifies your patching systems

Holistic Organizational Guidance

- Reviews current security controls and organizational practices
- Provides actionable reporting
- Accesses CDW security experts

The Benefits

Easy to Deploy

CDW Threat Check is managed by our experts. You configure your switch, install the device and participate in kickoff and result review calls. We do the rest.

Practical

CDW Threat Check identifies active malware and attacks – as well as risky behaviors, such as webmail and internet file sharing – to help provide concrete justification for information security program improvements and help garner CIO support.

Nonintrusive

CDW Threat Check monitors your network traffic without disrupting or seizing your data, and can be wiped after use.

Enterprise-Class Security Tools

Get an opportunity to experience cutting-edge security products on your own network with the guidance of CDW Threat Check engineers to navigate tools, identify issues and interpret results.

Expert No-Pressure Advice

CDW Threat Check engineers will help you review your organization's current security products, practices and procedures to identify improvements to your malware prevention and response posture, without sitting through a sales pitch.

Decades of Experience

CDW has maintained a security practice of experts since 1998.
